Music majors are different from many other college majors in that they begin coursework right away. And, there are a lot of required courses for musicians, such as theory, ear training, private lessons, band or choral ensembles, and many more. These classes are in addition to all of the general requirement courses like math or science. So as a music major, you will be taking a lot of music courses at the same time as your general requirement courses, creating full and busy semesters.
